Most people learn about marriage from an illegitimate source. They learn about marriage from the television, their friends, or the home that they grew up in. Marriage, in short, is a mirror in which the partners find a reflection of themselves and of the other; it is, furthermore, the mirror in which poets like Dante and Chaucer discover an abstract of their society and civilization. God designed marriage as a mirror. It's what intimacy is all about: seeing a reflection of yourself in your spouse. But it doesn't end with seeing your own reflection. Each time you look at your marriage, you should see God's reflection shining back.

Have you ever felt insecure and alone in your marriage, even if your spouse is sitting right next to you, affirming all of your wonderful qualities. Love and Marriage - The Reality of Being Married to a Mirror. Marriage shows you things about yourself, about your spouse and about your heart that you. In most Western cultures— with divorce rates rising, marriages rates falling, and more couples cohabiting and having kids without.
